YALE MEN HERE INTERESTED IN YALI COLLEGE IN CHINA

Sons of Eli Helping to Teach Chinese On Occidental Lines.

Yale Men in Hawaii have become interested in a remarkable experiment in education in China. As a matter of fact, it has passed beyond the status of an experiment, and success now is attending an effort to conduct a college in the interior of the Flowery Empire modeled along the lines to which the many sons of Eli adhere.

On the Tenyo Maru that passed through Honolulu a few days ago from the Orient to San Francisco was a passenger who could have told more about the recent anti-Manchu outbreak in China, and the present political, social and economic conditions of the interior, than all the correspondents who have been sending yards of stuff to the papers of the world.

Meets Class-mates Here.
This man is Dr. Edward Hume, Yale '97. He has a number of friends and several class-mates in Honolulu and during his short stay in port he gave them some interesting facts. Dr. Hume is in charge of the medical staff of Yali college, the Chinese institution founded and supported by Yale that is flourishing far in the interior, six days travel by steamer from the ports that the ordinary traveler sees.

Dr. Hume was a class-mate at Yale with a number of well-known men of Hawaii, including Senator A. F. Judd, Dr. Judd, Dr. Cooke, Dr. Baldwin and Charles R. Hemenway. All of these men are interested in the past, present and future of Yali college.

Yali college is an endeavor to conduct a college in China along Yale principles. It is a Christian institution but non-sectarian, and no attempt is made to do missionary work or proselyte on behalf of one or any sect. The course of study is similar to those offered at Yale, with the fundamental exception that instead of Greek, the Chinese classics are taught and studied.

RIVALS RACING FOR SOUTH POLE

London—The Kainua Maru, the ship of the Japanese Antarctic expedition, has arrived in Sydney, Australia. This vessel was obliged to turn back on account of the ice packs and icebergs which were encountered on March when she had reached Cook Island on the coast of Victoria. Several expeditions have started since Sir Ernest Shackleton returned from his long journey in the Antarctic regions with his stories of discovery and adventure, which have since been made the subject of his book and of many delightful lectures.

Since then Commander Peary's discovery of the North Pole has stimulated others to press forward in the south Arctic regions. The Japanese expedition, which was under the command of Lieutenant Shirase, left Yokohama last November. The Kainua Maru is a schooner of 150 tons and the expedition consisted of only 15 men, five of whom were to form the party for the final dash across the ice to the pole.

Two Parties Remain.
The withdrawal of the Japanese still leaves two expeditions in the field, the British and the Norwegian. Capt. Roald Amundsen has telegraphed in relation to the latter expedition that he has landed on the Antarctic ice barrier with eight men and 15 dogs with provisions and fuel for two years. With the departure of the Fram the dash for the pole was to commence. Thus the Norwegians are anticipating Captain Scott's expedition by several months. Captain Scott having previously announced his intention not to start until October when the Antarctic summer begins.

German Plan Cash.
A German Antarctic expedition, fully equipped, is starting from Hamburg under the command of Lieutenant Fiechter to attack the ice regions from the side opposite to that explored by Sir Ernest Shackleton. They expect to reach the ice in November, in order to take advantage of the most favorable time of year for forcing their way southward. A party consisting of four with Nansen sledges will make a dash for the
